SOLID WASTE MANAGEMENT TRAINING FOR TRIBES

APRIL 12-15, 2011
LAS VEGAS, NV

The U.S. Department of Agriculture, Rural Development Program has awarded a grant to the National Indian Justice Center (NIJC) to develop and deliver a 3 day training session on Solid Waste Management, plus an optional 1 day train the trainer session. The focus of the training session will be on current and critical issues like illegal dumping, the development and enforcement of tribal codes, jurisdictional conflicts, reduction and recycling, hazardous household waste, hazardous waste resulting from meth labs, illegal dump closures and clean-up project considerations, RCRA issues and other updates on solid waste management.

This course is designed for tribal elected officials, tribal environmental personnel, tribal court personnel, tribal law enforcement with the capacity to enforce tribal environmental laws, state and federal EPA personnel that work with tribes to address solid waste management issues and others interested in increasing the capacity of tribes to address solid waste management issues.

In addition to the onsite regional training described above, NIJC has developed an online course on Solid Waste Management. If you are interested in taking the online course, please go to the following NIJC website link: <http://www.nijc.org/DistanceLearning-DLCourses.html>. There you will find a course description and link to the enrollment form.
