TRIBAL COURT PROBATION

DECEMBER 5-7, 2012
LAS VEGAS, NEVADA

Presented By:

Liz Rehmel, Juvenile Probation Officer— the Umatilla Tribal Court

This training examines in detail the field of tribal court probation. It is designed to improve the skills of probation officers and to add new ones. The training is primarily for probation officers (adult and juvenile), but is relevant for those who interact with probation activities including police officers and court staff.

Effective probation programs are vital components of tribal courts. This training session explores a range of issues concerning tribal court probation: the evolution of tribal court systems, the essential components of tribal court probation, the evolution of juvenile justice, criminal procedures and the mandate of the Indian Civil Rights Act, diversion programs, sentencing alternatives, pre-sentence investigations and reports, probation hearings, probation orders and probation agreements, monitoring of probation, interaction with rehabilitation resource agencies, modification of probation, revocation of probation and release from probation.

The best practices in the field are presented and the trainees participate actively in the training process. On the final day of the session, the trainees engage in exercises based upon sample case materials. These exercises allow the trainees to interact and to examine issues in a peer group context.
